

Spyglass

Note: You will need your badge access the interiors of the Studio buildings to gather the data you need.

I've finally tracked down the last of the four enchanted spy glasses, so I know I'm near the end. I've added its location to the first three I already marked on the map. When I arrived, I found the spyglass in its case exactly where I expected. I removed it from the wooden case and swept it around the area. Just like the first three, the magical energy in this one quickly drew my gaze tracing a line outwards from my current location towards an obvious marker of the direction I should focus my search. I'm not usually one for superstition but there were enough legends of disturbing curses that I made sure to return it to where I found it when I was done so it could be discovered by other explorers.

The ancient writings clearly indicate that the spy glasses work together to lead you somewhere, but I'm stumped as to where to head next! Each spyglass seems to be pointing towards a wildly different place. Even though it narrows down my search to a specific area there's still FAR too much to cover entirely.

My translations prove that I'm close to finding the geometric center of the ancient source of power so I should be able to pinpoint the exact location. My only hope is that I know what to do with it when I get there. I've collected notes of everything I've seen along the way though, so I should be able to refer to them, as necessary.

